THE JOURNAL OF BETA Investment Strategies

Call for Papers: Special Issue on Value Investing

The Journal of Beta Investment Strategies (JBIS) is currently soliciting articles on value investing—a broad and enduring topic that continues to evolve with markets, technology, and investor behavior. We invite submissions exploring both the timeless foundations and modern adaptations of value investing.

Potential Topics Include

- How has value investing evolved over time, and what does the future hold?
- How are value investors leveraging artificial intelligence to enhance fundamental research and analysis?
- Which behavioral biases are leading to persistent asset mispricings, and how can value investors capitalize on these inefficiencies?
- Are the principles pioneered by Benjamin Graham still relevant today? If so, how have they adapted to contemporary markets?
- How do macroeconomic developments influence valuation?
- Applying value principles in portfolio construction and risk management
- Behavioral finance and its connection to value investing
- Fundamental versus quantitative valuation techniques
- Long-term investment horizons and the persistence of value investing

About JBIS

The Journal of Beta Investment Strategies provides comprehensive coverage of the latest innovations in beta-based investment products, including ETFs, factor investing, smart beta, indexes, direct/customized indexing, and passive investing.

Submission Details

To submit a paper and review author guidelines, visit:
https://jii.pm-research.com/authors

All papers are peer-reviewed and there is no submission fee.

Submission Deadline: May 31, 2026